FREE THINGS TO DO IN SOUTH LA

Overview

One of LA's most culturally rich and diverse regions, South LA includes Baldwin Hills/Crenshaw, Inglewood, Leimert Park, West Adams and more. Free activities include a guided tour outside the iconic Watts Towers, the Museum of African American Art at Macy's Baldwin Hills Crenshaw, and a visit to Leimert Park, dubbed "the Black Greenwich Village" by the late John Singleton.

NOTE: Due to COVID-19, attractions may be closed or have limited hours. Check individual websites for the latest updates.

Part 1

Watts

Founded as a ranching community in the late 19th century, Watts is best known for the iconic Watts Towers, handmade sculptures that were created by Sabato ("Simon") Rodia over a 33-year period from 1921 to 1954. Other cultural landmarks include the Watts Labor Community Action Committee (WLCAC), a seven-acre nonprofit arts facility dedicated to improving the quality of life for South LA residents; and the Watts Coffee House, a community hub known for its delicious soul food.

Part 2

Leimert Park

Dubbed the “Black Greenwich Village” by the late filmmaker John Singleton, the historic neighborhood of Leimert Park is widely regarded as the cultural hub for African Americans in L.A. Leimert Park's cultural must-sees include Eso Won Books, the landmark Vision Theatre, Art + Practice, The World Stage, Project Blowed at KAOS Network, and the legendary drum circle.

Part 3

West Adams

West Adams is one of LA's oldest neighborhoods - many of its notable buildings were built between 1880 and 1925. With its Victorian mansions and Craftsman bungalows, it was once known as the wealthiest district in the city, home to Downtown LA businessmen and USC professors. West Adams later became a favorite of African American stars like Ray Charles, Little Richard, Joe Louis, and Hattie McDaniel. West Adams is also home to two key buildings designed by renowned architect Paul Revere Williams: the First AME Church, LA's oldest African American congregation; and the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Building, now part of the South Central Los Angeles Regional Center (SCLARC).
