Dynamic L.A.

Be a part of our creative, culturally diverse city.

Welcome to Los Angeles, a dynamic, ever-evolving destination that thrives on authenticity and the unexpected. An inclusive place where everyone is welcome, the city proudly celebrates its rich ethnic and cultural diversity throughout its distinct neighborhoods.

A long-standing beacon for dreamers and innovators, L.A. is a city where new ideas are exchanged without judgment or limit. That's why the world's greatest artists, entertainers, and movers and shakers call it home. With its endless array of arts and cultural opportunities, L.A. offers visitors inspiration and creativity to discover around every corner.

The current epicenter of culinary creativity, Los Angeles is home to influential tastemakers who unconventionally push the boundaries of experimentation. Our vibrant mosaic of cultures is magnified throughout our culinary landscape with an incredible breadth of world cuisines encompassing Mexican, Korean, Chinese, Middle Eastern, Japanese, and more.

The destination's latest and greatest offerings are curated in this Los Angeles Visitor's Guide, which showcases must-see experiences, hidden gems, and visitor services. Be sure to download our free Discover L.A. app to unlock even more content and to create an L.A. experience that's tailored to your personal preferences.

As you share your memories with friends and family on social media, tag #discoverLA so we can engage during your visit. Don't forget to follow Discover Los Angeles on Facebook, @DiscoverLA on Twitter and Instagram, and DiscoverLA on Pinterest.

Whether it's the magic of a movie studio, the glamour of awards season, the beauty of Griffith Park, or the serenity of a stunning sunset, the possibilities in Los Angeles are truly limitless. No matter what you choose to do, I hope you create treasured memories in our City of Angels.

Just for Kicks

Los Angeles Football Club winger Carlos Vela dishes on his favorite things about Los Angeles.

It's almost too perfect that his last name is Vela. In Spanish, vela means candle. And since becoming the first designated player signed by the Los Angeles Football Club (lafc.com) in 2017, wingman Carlos Vela has simply been on fire.

How else to explain his meteoric rise to Major League Soccer (MLS) legend status? In July 2019, Vela set a record as the fastest player in MLS history to score 20 goals. In 2018, he was named to the prestigious MLS Best XI, an honor bestowed upon the best 11 players in the league, and he was a major factor in helping LAFC become one of only four clubs in MLS history to reach the playoffs in its inaugural campaign.

Put simply, in his first two years with the six-year-old LAFC, Mexican-born Vela has become one of the biggest stars in the sport, and has established himself as a role model for young soccer fans, both in L.A. and around the world. He also loves the diverse city of Los Angeles and the fans of his sport who call it home.

"[The fans] are like our family," says Vela, 31. "When we started this project, we said we wanted to build a great club that is inclusive, a club that can bring everyone together. We bring goals and great football to our fans because they are with us every game. We are proud of this club and proud to play for our amazing fans."

On days when he isn't blistering soccer balls net-ward and bringing crowds at Banc of California Stadium to their feet, Vela and his family have several top spots around town. Some of their favorite restaurants are Éléphante (elephante/la.com), a high-end Italian eatery in Santa Monica, and Nobu (noburestaurants.com/losangeles), the L.A. location of chef Nobuyuki Matsuhisa's sushi chain. Vela also likes to take advantage of the city's climate and diverse natural settings by spending time outdoors with his kin.

Not surprisingly, Vela likes other sports in addition to soccer. If the Vela clan is heading out to cheer on other local teams, it's usually the Los Angeles Lakers at STAPLES Center (staplescenter.com)—Vela himself is a fan of LeBron James—or the Los Angeles Dodgers at Dodger Stadium (losangeles.dodgers.mlb.com). While Vela enjoys visiting both of those sports venues, he loves his home turf best. "Nothing is better than Banc of California Stadium," he says.

Between Vela's success on the field and his passion for the city he now calls home, it's clear the love affair between Los Angeles and Carlos Vela is off to a great start. Here's hoping his light shines brightly in the City of Angels for many years to come.

DODGER STADIUM

Game On!

Where to catch a game in this buzzing sports hub.

Los Angeles has become a landmark destination in the world of sports. Counting among its professional sports organizations two football teams, three basketball teams, two soccer teams, a baseball team, and a hockey team, the city is home to some of the newest and some of the most historic venues in sports.

Beloved longtime institutions include the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, the Rose Bowl Stadium, and Dodger Stadium, which is undergoing a major renovation this year that will introduce a center-field plaza with two acres of entertainment, new food offerings, and a play area for kids.

Joining the ranks of these iconic sports locations are the city's latest arenas: the world-class, 3-million-square-foot SoFi Stadium (opening in 2020, it's the home field for the NFL's Los Angeles Rams and Los Angeles Chargers); and the 22,000-seat, state-of-the-art Banc of California Stadium (where, since its opening in 2018, soccer fans have cheered on the Los Angeles Football Club amid views of the Downtown skyline).

In 2020, Los Angeles will proudly host Major League Baseball's All-Star Game and the NCAA Men's West Regional Basketball Championship—and there's plenty more in store.

THE LANGHAM HUNTINGTON, PASADENA

Global Dining

Restaurateur and chef Vivian Ku shares a tour of world cuisines within the bounds of L.A.

PINE & CRANE

If you want to find

Vivian Ku's two Taiwanese cafes, Joy in Highland Park and Pine & Crane in Silver Lake, look for the lines snaking outside the doors. Ku's fervent fans have come to expect a bit of a wait before they sit down to dishes like noodle soup with beef shank, baby bok choy, and preserved mustard greens at Pine & Crane, and house-made scallion sesame bread stuffed with pork belly, five-spice beef, or braised bean curd at Joy.

It was a winding path that led Ku to open Pine & Crane in 2014 and Joy four years later. Born in the L.A. neighborhood of Monterey Park and raised in Bakersfield, where her family moved to start a farm, she earned an economics degree at Harvard and then studied at the Culinary Institute of America.

In creating her restaurant menus, Ku was inspired by her grandparents who fled the Chinese Civil War in 1949 and settled in Taiwan. There, her grandfather started a business making fresh and dried noodles. What Ku loves about Taiwanese cuisine, she says, is how it has been influenced by the diverse people who have lived there, from the aborigines to migrants from Japan and mainland China. "Taiwan is one-eleventh the size of California," she says, "but it's a very interesting culinary melting pot."

Shuttling between her two restaurants, where she might be found doing anything from fixing clogged sinks to cooking wontons, busing tables, and greeting guests, Ku has little time to stray far from the Silver Lake neighborhood where she and her husband live. Still, she's able to enjoy L.A.'s own culinary melting pot close to home.

"I think if I could pick only one restaurant to eat at for the rest of my life, it would be Osawa," Ku says of Pasadena's Osawa Shabu Shabu & Sushi (theosawa.com). "They take so much care in everything they cook. I always feel grateful when I eat here." Her go-to lunch: the chirashi sushi and udon noodle bowl.

Another eatery that counts Ku among its regulars is El Huarachwe Azteca (elhuaracheaztecaalive.com) in Highland Park. "This no-frills, family-owned Mexican restaurant is very close to Joy," Ku says, "so I'm always running in there for their Super Huarache—thick oval fried masa with all the toppings."

Named for its quarter-pound servings, Quarters Korean BBQ (quarterskbbq.com) in Koreatown ranks among Ku's top dining options as well. "Everyone comes here for Korean barbecue," she says, "so it can take an hour and a half to get in, but that's part of the experience. One of my friends will put our names down while another group goes to pick up corndogs at Myungrang Hot Dog (myungranghotdogus.com), which is also in Koreatown, so we have something to cushion ourselves with while we wait.

Dining Hubs

Centers of gastronomic diversity throughout the city turn out creative spins on dishes from around the globe.

HUB: CHINATOWN

Howlin' Ray's

Ever since 2016, when Howlin' Ray's ended its life as a food truck and moved into permanent digs in Chinatown's Far East Plaza, people have been waiting hours for their chance to bite into the storied Nashville hot chicken. As they wait, the diners debate what they'll choose on the six-level "How hot?" scale, and are sternly advised not to chance the ultimate "howlin'" level. YouTube videos demonstrate what happens to those who ignore the warning. Tip: Wait times are posted on Twitter.

HUB: DTLA/ARTS DISTRICT

Redbird

Housed in what was once the rectory building of St. Vibiana's cathedral (and is now an event space), chef Neal Fraser's Redbird takes a reverential approach to fresh ingredients, with the barbecue-smoked tofu drawing as many raves as the $140 porterhouse for two. Still, the vibe in those gorgeous surroundings is playful and convivial, and it's possible to make a lovely meal out of small plates like house-cured sardines, burrata with charred leeks, and beef tartare topped with a runny egg yolk. » 114 E. 2nd St., Los Angeles, 213.788.1191, redbird.la

Bavel

After opening Bestia, their wildly popular Italian restaurant in the downtown Arts District, husband-and-wife chefs Ori Menashe and Genevieve Gergis wanted to honor their family roots in Israel, Morocco, Turkey, and Egypt. The result is Bavel, another runaway success with a menu that features roasted lamb neck shawarma, braised beef cheek tagine, grilled fish, lamb, and rib eye, and stellar Middle Eastern spreads. Reservations can be tough to get, especially on the patio, so plan ahead, consider an early or late dinner, or grab a drink at the bar while waiting for your table. » 500 Mateo St., Los Angeles, 213.232.4966, baveldtla.com

Konbi

Bon Appétit named this tiny 10-seat sandwich shop the 2019 Restaurant of the Year. Its signature dish is a Japanese-inspired egg salad sandwich that became an Instagram sensation. Just as delectable, if not quite as photogenic, are the pork katsu and eggplant katsu sandwiches, house-made pickles, and the green salad with wax beans, hazelnuts, and miso dressing. The chocolate croissants sell out as soon as they leave the oven, but the other pastries—including a custardy canelé—are too sublime to be considered second best. » 1463 Sunset Blvd., konbila.com

Jon & Vinny's

It's hard to imagine how anyone could have anything but a good time at Jon & Vinny's, the lively red-sauce Italian joint from the team behind hit restaurants like Animal, Son of a Gun, Trois Mec, and Petit Trois. While the pizzas and pastas are the star attractions here, you might find yourself raving about the simple arugula salad with lemon, oil, and grana padano and wondering whether you can return for the giant marinara braised meatballs after a couple of walks around the block. HUB: HISTORIC FILIPINOTOWN
Porridge + Puffs

Minh Phan's award-winning porridge enterprise began life as a pop-up, and while it's now a well-established brick-and-mortar restaurant, it still retains a sense of discovery. The light-filled space with its long communal table in the center makes it an especially welcoming spot for solo diners. Plus, the beautifully composed bowls of rice porridge with a rotation of toppings that include short ribs, sausage, mushrooms, greens, and chicken are perfectly portioned for one. The pillowy puffs are offered in savory and sweet versions or unadorned and perfect for dunking. » 2801 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, 213.908.5313, porridgeandpuffs.com

HUB: KOREATOWN
Le Comptoir

When you think of a special-occasion spot, you might not imagine a tiny restaurant with a counter that seats just 10 guests and offers a full view of the kitchen. But Le Comptoir, which is tucked into a ground-floor storefront of the historic Hotel Normandie, has earned a rare Michelin star for its extraordinary eight-course vegetarian-forward tasting menu ($120 plus supplements for various proteins, a spectacular sourdough bread, and an optional wine-pairing). A credit card deposit is required with reservation. » 3606 W. 6th St., Los Angeles, 213.290.0750, lecomptoirla.com

Atrium

A tree grows in the middle of this soaring indoor space, which also features plush banquettes along the walls and a large circular bar. While the restaurant sits on the main thoroughfare of Vermont Avenue, outdoor tables are tucked away in an alley, feeling far from the traffic and noise. The menu is a culinary tour of L.A.'s neighborhoods, with dishes that range from grilled cauliflower shawarma to Baja prawns and classic Italian pastas. » 1816 N. HomeState

Calling itself "A Texas Kitchen in Los Angeles," HomeState in Highland Park (locations are also in Hollywood and Playa Vista) is serving up crowd-pleasing eats, including nine different kinds of breakfast tacos, "anytime tacos" with vegan, vegetarian, chicken, and meat options; several types of queso; and Frito Pie in a Bag. At the Highland Park and Playa Vista outposts, diners can enjoy their eats with $10 margaritas and spicy palomas. » 5611 N. HUB: SHERMAN OAKS

Mizlala

This smart, casual eatery, just a few blocks from the Sherman Oaks Galleria mall, is the perfect place to fuel up before or after a day of shopping. It's also a worthy destination in itself with a menu that's a wish list of Middle Eastern favorites, including green falafel, moussaka, saffron chicken tagine, grilled kabobs, and one of the best hummus dips in town. There are no vowels in the name of this Sunset Junction sidewalk cafe, where there are also no signs and no reservations taken. What there is, every night of the week, is a crowd, eager to feast on the highly inventive and very affordable Israeli fare. The menu, which is handwritten on brown paper bags, consists of about a dozen items. Most are vegetarian, though some kind of lamb stew is likely among them on any given night. Fans claim the hummus, served with pickled vegetables, is the best in all of L.A. » 3536 W. WHAT TO DO IN L.A.

One Day in L.A.

Colombian-born rising star Isabella Gomez picks prized places to dance, late-night snack, and shop in her adopted city.

ECHO PARK

On hiatus from playing opinionated, queer-identifying high-schooler Elena Alvarez on the hit sitcom One Day at a Time, Isabella Gomez has had a pretty breezy day. “I woke up, I read a little, I had lunch with friends, and then I watched Keeping Up with the Kardashians,” says the 22-year-old rising star with a semi-guilty chuckle.

Her TV character’s single mom, Cuban-American nurse Penelope (Justina Machado), would be alarmed about that Kardashian quotient. After all, Penelope and feisty abuela Lydia (played by legendary actress Rita Moreno) live a life of grounded, blue-collar values in L.A.’s Echo Park neighborhood.

But it’s good to know that Gomez—who was born in Medellín, Colombia—has acclimated to stardom and the City of Angels, especially considering she moved here just five years ago. “I love that you can drive 20 minutes and be in a completely different type of place, like from the beach to the mountains,” cheers the ebullient actress, who, akin to her One Day alter ego, is keen on L.A.’s array of what she calls “super-artsy” coffee houses. (Gomez also feels she is as caring as Elena—“but not as brave,” she says.) “I’m just fascinated by people. That’s one of the reasons I got into acting.”

Gomez was just 6 years old when she told her mom, a veterinarian, and dad, who was then a lawyer and now helps manage his daughter’s career, that she wanted “to be on TV” (thanks to Disney Channel hits like High School Musical). When she was 10, the family moved to Orlando, Florida, where she started taking acting classes and, soon enough, booked a conga line of commercials. Following her sophomore year in high school, Gomez booked a recurring part on the El Rey network secret-spy drama Matador, playing the main character’s teen sister. Suddenly the Gomezes were settled in L.A.—and Isabella was a star of one of the most buzzed-about sitcoms in recent memory (for latecomers, One Day is a Latinized reboot of producer Norman Lear’s retro-TV classic).

She hasn’t forsaken her roots, though. Among her favorite hangs: Downtown’s The Conga Room (congaroom.com), a colorful, salsa-happy dance club and performance venue co-owned by the likes of Jennifer Lopez and NBA star Trevor Ariza. “You have to go to Birdies (birdiesla.com) after,” Gomez instructs. On Friday and Saturday it’s open 24 hours, and “they have the best chicken sandwich ever, ever, ever.” Another favorite: the Colombian spot Sabor Colombiano (saborcolombiano.com), noted for its buñuelos (cheese fritters) and camarones tumaquenos (shrimp sautéed with bell peppers in coconut milk). “I feel at home there,” she says.

Gomez heads to the renowned outdoor mall The Grove in Mid-Wilshire for Umami Burger (umamiburger.com) or to the adjacent Original Farmers Market for the Brazilian churrascaria fare at Pampas Grill (pampas-grill.com). “The line is always, like, half a mile [long], but it’s so worth it,” she says. She also suggests the fresh-made green juice, which she says is “actually good,” at Toast Bakery Cafe (toastbakerycafe.net) nearby on 3rd Street. When in the San Fernando Valley, she visits the quaint Aroma Coffee and Tea (aromacoffeeandtea.com) in Studio City. “It’s in a little house, the desserts are insane, and it’s near Warner Bros. [Studios], so there’s likely always some big celebrity there my friends will freak out about.”

While Gomez declares that she is no fashionista—“I’m an American Apparel kinda gal,” she says; “they already have the outfits all put together!”—she does enjoy skimming through the mix of vintage and original, handcrafted clothes at the Melrose Trading Post (melrosetradingpost.org), a bohemian-vibed swap meet held Sundays at the iconic Fairfax High School (where everyone from Carole Lombard to Mila Kunis cracked the books). “There’s food and performances—it’s so fun,” says Gomez.

Another of Gomez’s pastimes: walking around Echo Park Lake (laparks.org/aquatic/lake/echo-park-lake), which is especially picturesque when covered in lotus blossoms in July, with a BFF and his three puppies. (Gomez’s cat, Tita, whom she describes as “all white with one blue eye and one yellow eye,” stays at home.)

Gomez’s career is going at a good clip, too. She just costarred in A Cinderella Story: Christmas Wish (on Netflix); One Day’s fourth season arrives on CBS’s sister network Pop this year; and she’s got the college-campus psychological thriller Dembanger coming soon. Will the star who graduated valedictorian in her online high school class be able to squeeze in college at some point? “I feel like I’m going through a little bit of a quarter-life crisis,” Gomez says with a laugh. For now, the self-described “stubborn perfectionist” is just trying to take life one day at a time. “I started meditating. I’m journaling. I started a new acting class,” she says. “It’s exciting to stretch my wings.”

Yep, she’s definitely an Angeleno.

Engaging with Art

Museum of Contemporary Art director Klaus Biesenbach shares some of the discoveries he's made since his 2018 move to Los Angeles.

After Klaus Biesenbach

was named director of The Museum of Contemporary Art (MOCA; moca.org) in July 2018, he wasted no time in articulating a vision that extends beyond the institution's vast world-class permanent collection of roughly 7,000 objects in all types of media and its groundbreaking exhibitions. "It is important for MOCA to be a resident among residents in our city," says Biesenbach. "We need to be there for our city, of service to our community, and engage with the most pressing cultural and social issues of our time—for us, that is social and environmental justice. We can do this through exhibitions and also public programs, like the Warehouse Programs at MOCA's Geffen location in Little Tokyo." A large warehouse space separate from MOCA's Grand Avenue venue, the Geffen Contemporary at MOCA is intended, Biesenbach says, "to be a place for experimentation, collaboration, community engagement, performance, and much more."

Biesenbach, who was born in Germany, was instrumental in establishing Berlin's reputation as a city for living and working artists. He later moved to New York to work for the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA), where he eventually became chief curator-at-large. He's been known throughout his career for promoting emerging artists and engaging a wider spectrum of the community with contemporary art.

Although he had visited Los Angeles many times beginning in the 1990s, those whirlwind trips to visit artists and galleries left him little time to really explore the city, he says, something he's now been working hard to rectify. "I have really tried to get to know the diverse range of communities and parts of L.A., from Mt. Baldy to San Pedro to Pico Union to Topanga Canyon," Biesenbach says. Among his discoveries he points to the Huntington Library, Art Museum, and Botanical Gardens (huntington.org) in San Marino, which he says is "now one of my favorites connecting complex layers of culture and nature as culture."

Across the city, several spots have similarly become "don't-miss" venues: In Downtown L.A. there's Navel (navel.la), which bills itself as "a test site for community-driven projects, critical equitable practices, collaborative learning, and kinship." Jenny's (jennys.us), a small gallery space in Silver Lake, tends to feature underexposed artists from the U.S. and Europe, while the Underground Museum (theunderground-museum.org) is a family-run cultural hub and alternative arts space in Arlington Heights.

When it comes to entertaining out-of-town guests, Biesenbach likes to showcase the Downtown Arts District and MOCA Geffen in Little Tokyo; the tasty offerings of the nearby Grand Central Market (grandcentralmarket.com) are reserved for his dearest friends, however.

Despite his packed MOCA schedule, some of the upcoming year's cultural offerings have caught his eclectic eye, beginning with LACMA's focus on artist Betye Saar (lacma.org), September 2019 through April 2020. Then there's the Frieze Los Angeles art fair (frieze.com/fairs/frieze-los-angeles) on February 14 through 16, and next June, the LA Philharmonic will present the West Coast premiere of Reich/Richter (laphil.com), a groundbreaking commissioned collaboration between composer Steve Reich and artist Gerhard Richter.

In the meantime, MOCA's own exhibit With Pleasure: Pattern and Decoration in American Art 1972–1985 will be on view through May 11, 2020. Biesenbach says it promises to "not only be beautiful, but also a revelation to how we think about that moment in art history."

From winter 2020 to spring 2021 at MOCA's Geffen location, a retrospective surveys 25 years of HENRY TAYLOR's paintings, sculptures, and installations, in which he captures a moment and often points to social and political issues affecting African Americans today.

Celebrating Differences

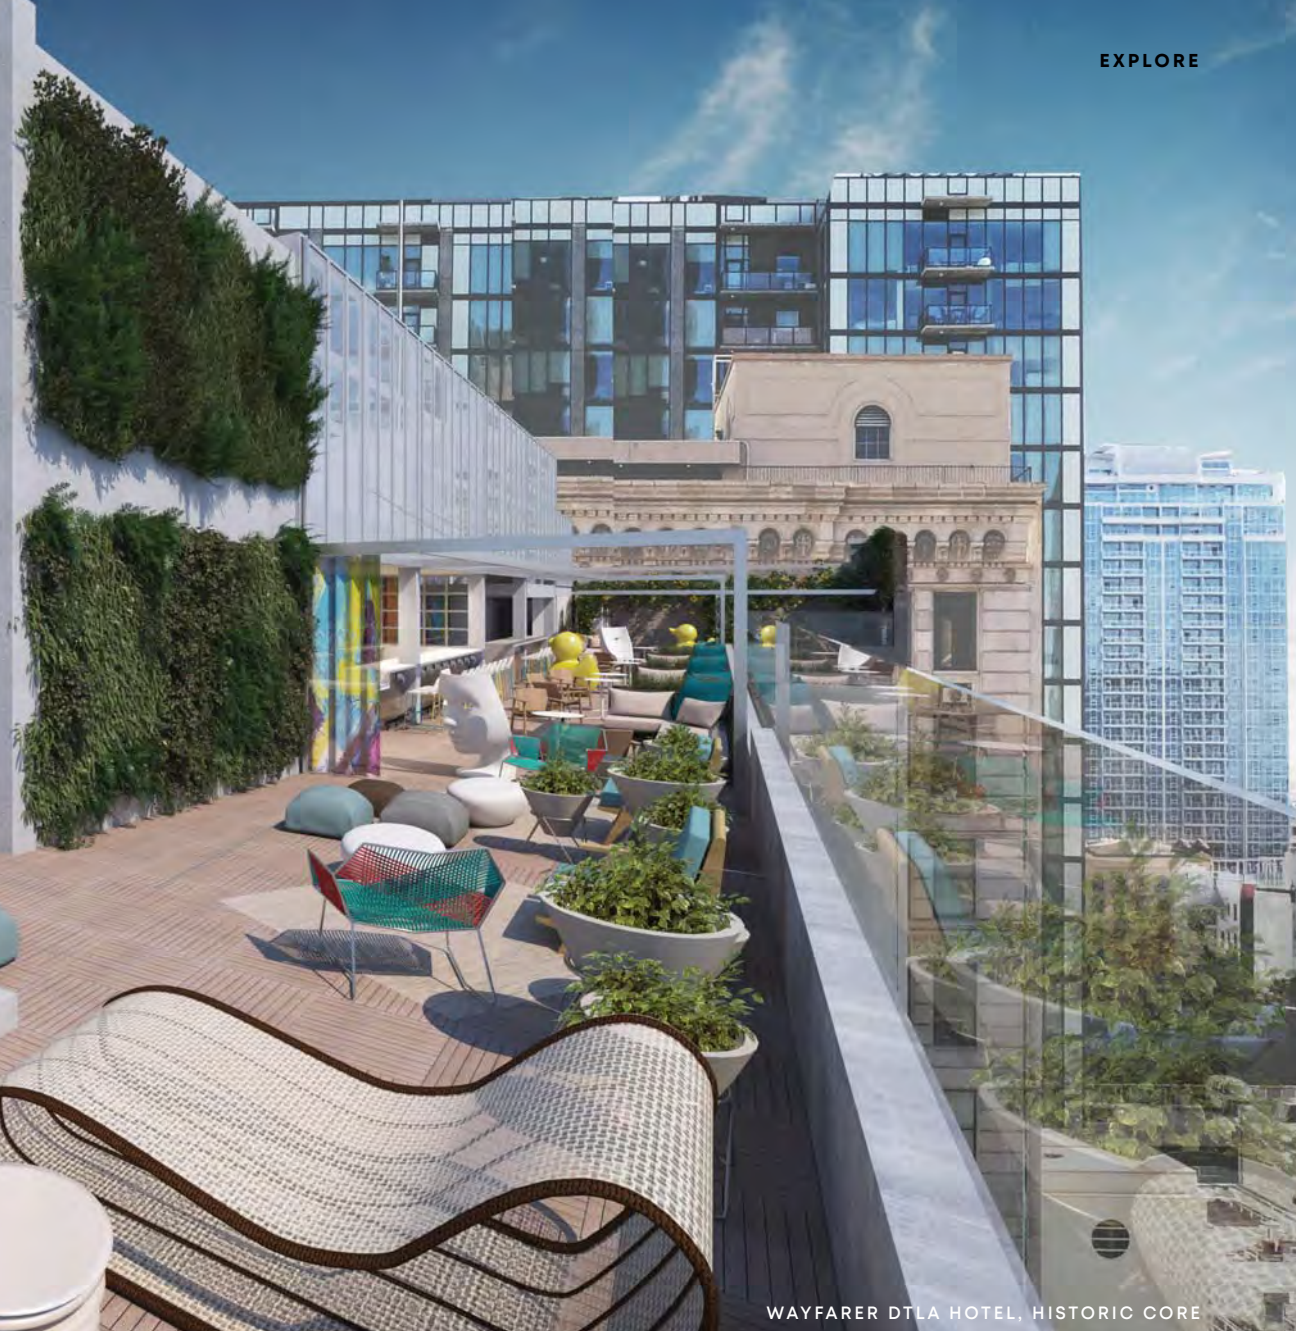

To experience the true character of Los Angeles, spend time in some of its unique neighborhoods, from the eclectic vibe in Downtown to the breezy beach culture of the communities along the coastline.

Downtown/ L.A. Metro

Hip hotels, trendsetting restaurants, and world-class entertainment venues and museums sustain a thriving art scene and nightlife along Downtown Los Angeles' walkable streets. The L.A. LIVE entertainment complex offers restaurants, live music venues, Microsoft Theater, bowling alley/eatery Lucky Strike, and multiplex Regal L.A. LIVE: A Barco Innovation Center. Across the street, STAPLES Center hosts major concerts and sporting events. The arena is home to the Lakers, Clippers, Kings, and Sparks. The Los Angeles Rams NFL team's temporary home field is the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, where they will play until their grand new SoFi Stadium at Hollywood Park is completed in 2020. L.A.'s newest sports team is the Los Angeles Football Club, which plays in the soccer-specific facility the Banc of California Stadium. Walt Disney Concert Hall is a modern architectural masterpiece right next door to a cultural and design showpiece, The Broad museum. A crop of new luxury lodging options includes establishments like the Proper Downtown L.A. and Soho Warehouse.

Neighborhood: Fashion/ Jewelry District

Become a fashion insider in the Fashion District, where you can get the scoop on the latest trends and score great bargains on clothes, shoes, accessories, and jewelry. At the intersection of 9th and Los Angeles streets is a wholesale marketplace,

VELVET BY GRAHAM & SPENCER

L.A.-Made

Take home some of the city's flavors, fashions, and fun.

"Design, fashion, art, jewelry, all of it—some of the most influential makers and doers are right here in the enormous and beautiful city of Los Angeles," says designer Clare Vivier, whose venerated CLARE V. line of leather goods, accessories, and clothing has been an influence on style in L.A. and beyond for more than a decade. Here are a few shopping opportunities that let visitors bring home a slice of SoCal.

Honed-Here Wave Riders

Inspired by traditional longboards of the 1960s, El Segundo native Tyler Hatzikian has been handcrafting boards for more than three decades at TYLER SURFBOARDS. Hatzikian shapes, colors, glasses, and finishes each board, and his works are some of the most respected on the surf scene. Stop by and ogle his craftsmanship—in vintage, new, and custom boards.

Angeleno Fashion Conscious

REFORMATION takes eco-chic to a new level with breezy dresses and separates that are produced with minimal carbon footprint. Made from recycled and low-impact naturally derived fabrics, Reformation maxi dresses have gained cult status. The company also has bridal, denim, and plus-size lines, and a Melrose Avenue location offering 100 percent vintage alternatives.

► 8810 Washington Boulevard, #102, Culver City, thereformation.com

City of Angels Sweets

At the LETTERPRESS CHOCOLATE small-batch chocolate factory and store, every bar is hand-wrapped. The most popular: the award-winning Ucayali Private Reserve 70% Dark Chocolate. Participants in factory tours witness behind-the-scenes magic and score samples.

► 2835 South Robertson Boulevard, Los Angeles, letterpresschocolate.com

Hometown Joe

GO GET EM TIGER coffee beans are roasted in Southern California. The company sells them at seven locations around the city and ships them to fans through a subscription service. The newest shop recently opened in Downtown L.A. beside another local icon, The Music Center.

► 135 North Grand Avenue, Los Angeles, gget.com

Cali Casualwear

Designers Jenny Graham and Toni Spencer founded VELVET BY GRAHAM & SPENCER in 1997 with a singular goal: to make the best T-shirt and to make it in Los Angeles. The company's offerings have since grown to include a variety of laid-back staples for men and women, including a line of jeans crafted from Japanese denim and designed, washed, dyed, and sewn locally.

La La Land Jam

On any day of the week there is a guaranteed line to get into SQIRL cafe, and one of the most requested breakfasts is a hefty home-baked slice of brioche toast smeared with your choice of jam. Owner Jessica Koslow started making gourmet jams in intoxicating combinations like Elberta Peach and Lemon Verbena or Seascape Strawberry and Rose Geranium back in 2011, and they're still the best way to start the day. Get a jar to go or snap up one of her celebrated cookbooks.

Ticket to Ride

A far-reaching transit system and bike-share opportunities lay the wonders of the city at your feet.

Los Angeles offers so much to see and do that narrowing down an itinerary can be a challenge. Making the most of Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro; metro.net) services, however, can allow a visitor to forgo the freeways and maximize time for fun.

PRO TIP: Plug dream itineraries into Metro's itinerary planner (metro.net/riding/trip-planner) and hit the town. Want to cover even more ground? Add a bicycle to the mix.

Metro Light Rail and Bus Lines

Take Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro; metro.net) to some of the city's favorite hot spots via light-rail and bus (see map above). The TAP card, a reusable transit-fare card that can be used at 26 L.A. transit agencies, makes it easy to ride Metro. The card can be purchased and loaded with fare at Metro stations and local vendors (find a location at taptogo.net).

Bike Sharing

Located just outside of many Metro stops are Metro Bike Share stations (metro.net/bikeshare), which enable visitors to combine bicycle and transit trips to travel around key urban areas of L.A. county without driving. The program has met with such success that it has recently expanded into Venice, the Port of L.A., West L.A., Central L.A., and North Hollywood. The cost of this 24-hour/365-day-a-year service is $1.75 for each 30 minutes. Other options include purchasing a day pass ($5 per day for unlimited free trips of 30 minutes or less; $1.75 per 30 minutes thereafter) or buying single-ride passes in bulk, which are discounted by up to 50 percent. Passes can be loaded on TAP cards to make checking out a bike even more convenient.

Other public bike-share programs are also easily accessible from many Metro rail and bus stations and have affordable rates. Santa Monica's Breeze (santamonica bikeshare.com) covers ground in Santa Monica, Venice, Westwood, Beverly Hills, and West Hollywood. Or bike around Beverly Hills via Beverly Hills Bike Share (beverlyhillsbikeshare.com).

San Pedro is another seaside town sharing bikes as well as electric scooters. LimeBike's signature green-and-yellow two-wheelers are available there for $1 per half-hour.

For car-free itineraries and guides, visit discoverlosangeles.com/travel.

Two-Wheeled Tours

Keen on taking a bicycle tour? SANTA MONICA BIKE CENTER (thebikecenter.com/santa-monica) is a sure bet with three- to four-hour guided expeditions that focus on subjects ranging from street art to urban farming.

PERRY'S LEGENDS HISTORIC BIKE TOURS (perryscave.com) serves Venice and Santa Monica, where surfing, skateboarding, and beach volleyball were born.

HANDLEBAR BIKE TOURS LOS ANGELES (handlebarbiketours.com) offers a two-hour tour that begins at the iconic Grand Central Market and takes in all the highlights of Downtown.

Tourists who want to see everything in one day may opt for BIKES AND HIKES LA (bikesandhikesla.com). The organization's six-hour LA in a Day tour covers 32 miles and attractions that top many tourists' bucket lists.

To ride through and learn about Los Angeles' vibrant culture and sample its culinary offerings with a local Angeleno as your private guide, call on LA CYCLE TOURS (lacycletours.com).

LOS ANGELES
INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

LAX Leads the Way

Multibillion-dollar changes are underway at Los Angeles' major gateway, with more on the horizon.

Change is in the air at Los Angeles International Airport (LAX; flylax.com), which is in the midst of a massive multibillion-dollar renovation. Known as the Landside Access Modernization Program (LAMP), the project is scheduled to be completed by 2023, and will allow LAX to better serve its more than 87 million air-travel passengers a year. While many of the improvements, including a redesigned Tom Bradley International Terminal and revamped retail and dining options, have been completed, there are many more in progress for travelers to look forward to.

Making Connections

In March 2019, Los Angeles World Airports (LAWA), the city department that runs the airport, broke ground on the largest component of LAMP, an elevated driverless electric train, or automated people mover. What may sound like a whimsical Disneyland ride is seriously good news for travelers. When complete, the time-saving people mover will glide across 2.25 miles of elevated guideway from the west side of LAX to a brand-new consolidated rental car facility on the airport's east side. Guests will be able to ride from end to end in about 10 minutes, with trains projected to run every two minutes between the peak hours of 9 a.m. and 11 p.m. The new rental-car structure, which will incorporate sustainable measures such as drought-tolerant California native plants and a solar farm, will combine more than 20 rental car companies under one roof and eliminate 3,200 rental-car shuttle trips per day.

In addition to stopping at three locations within LAX and the rental car facility, the people mover will feature stops at two intermodal transportation facilities. Slated to open in 2021, Intermodal Transportation Facility – West will offer drivers a convenient new option for pick-up and drop-off outside the terminal area. Expect about 4,500 parking spaces with short- and long-term options, along with valet parking and a meet-and-greet space. The people mover will also provide a direct connection to LA Metro's under-construction Crenshaw/LAX Line and Green Line light rail extension, allowing for easy car-free rides to the airport.

Taking Off

While not part of the LAMP initiative, a new Midfield Satellite Concourse is under construction. With completion projected for summer 2020, the new concourse will feature 12 gates to provide more options for arriving international and domestic flights. Access to the concourse will be provided by bus and by a 1,000-foot-long underground pedestrian tunnel, complete with moving walkways and passenger mobility carts, from the Tom Bradley International Terminal.

The concourse's contemporary, light-filled new structure will offer 44,000 feet of food-and-beverage and retail space, and up to 57,000 square feet of airline club space. Other amenities include two nursing rooms, a service-animal relief area, a quiet room, and children's play areas. The concourse will also bring new aircraft aprons and taxiways, allowing for more aircraft movement across LAX's two runway complexes.

Art Appreciation

Travelers will welcome long layovers as they browse innovative and engaging in-terminal public art installations. Temporary exhibitions and permanent installations with works by local and regional artists will be displayed throughout the airport.

Digital Visibility

Introduced to LAX in 2019, Aira allows people experiencing low vision or blindness to navigate the airport using their smartphones. The free mobile app connects travelers with highly trained navigators, who provide real-time audio instructions.

Status Check

As work continues, an interactive map that includes current construction projects can be found at flylax.com. Just click on the hard hats. A new Twitter feed, @FlyLAXstats, provides frequently updated traffic, parking, and TSA wait-time information.

Accessibility and Special Needs

The Coveted Climate

Renowned for its glorious weather, Los Angeles enjoys comfortable temperatures and low humidity year-round. Average highs in winter and spring range from 68 to 72 degrees Fahrenheit, warming up to 84 for summer. A few rainy days typically occur between November and April. In May, June, and July, a marine layer often casts a cloudy haze over the beach communities in the mornings, only to burn off midday. August tends to be the hottest month of the dry, sunny summer, but coastal breezes temper the heat. Evenings are cool throughout the year. Pack beachwear, comfortable layers of lightweight clothing, a light jacket, and sunscreen to make the most of L.A.'s mild climate.

Get the App

The Discover L.A. app is a sleekly designed pocket guide exclusively made for those looking to optimize their experience in the City of Angels. Packed with rich content and tailored for those looking to explore the best of Los Angeles, the app is available as a free download for both Android and iOS devices. Thematically synced to deliver personalized content based on weather, time, and distance, the app curates suggestions from the city's endless entertainment options—including world-class museums, diverse dining options, and captivating events.

BUENA PARK A HIDDEN GEM IN SOCAL

When the SoCal sun beckons, book your getaway to the under-the-radar town of Buena Park. Where you'll find world-famous entertainment, award-winning dining and accommodations for every budget. The lively city is just 20 miles from Los Angeles, 15 miles from the beach and 5 miles from Disneyland®, making it the perfect home base location for your Orange County adventure.

Enjoy over 40 exhilarating rides like the brand-new dive coaster, HangTime and meet Snoopy at California's First Theme Park - Knott's Berry Farm. Seasonal celebrations like the Boysenberry Festival, Knott's Merry Farm and Knott's Scary Farm provide a unique experience each time you visit. In the summer cool off at Knott's Soak City, a 15-acre waterpark packed with slides, a lazy river and wave pool.

It's a well-kept secret that Buena Park has some of the best food in the area and its culinary roots date back to the 1930s when the boysenberry was created here. Today you can taste where it all began at Mrs. Knott's Chicken Dinner and try new favorites like the authentic Cuban cuisine at Porto's Bakery and Cafe (named Yelp's #1 restaurant). You can choose from over 60 craft beers at Rock & Brews, dine on divine soufflé pancakes at Basilur Tea and sip bewitchingly- tasty cocktails at The Cauldron.

Those looking for some entertainment with their dinner will find the swashbuckling family-friendly favorite Pirates Dinner Adventure and the jousting and swordplay of Medieval Times. Even adults can get in on the action at Buena Park's newest dining experience - Teatro Martini.

In Buena Park you'll get the best of both worlds—small town charm that you can find at the many seasonal events and the big city ease of having everything you need within a very short drive. With over a dozen options to choose from, Buena Park hotels have some of the best amenities in the area with many offering free parking, shuttles to Disneyland® and local attractions and no resort fees.
